

Baseline studies would provide with a detailed record of environmental condition: physical, biological, social, economical, and cultural conditions at the site before exploration and project begins. Our experts are capable of acquiring and processing baseline data and are knowledgeable regarding laws and regulation. After we collect and summarize all applicable local laws, regulations and guidelines, we proceed with a detailed regulatory analysis of all findings. Subsequently, we undertake a comprehensive inventory of all available environmental and human resource information. Our final report includes a compilation and analysis of our findings.