

Environmental impact assessments incorporate primary and secondary data to evaluate potential environmental and socio-economic impacts from proposed project activities. As part of the EIA process GEO outlines prevention and mitigation measures for potentially significant impacts and designs a protection and management plan to ensure compliance with existing legislation and company directives.